Abstract. Tactile and haptic interaction is becoming increasingly important and ergonomic standards can ensure that systems are designed with sufficient concerns for ergonomics and interoperability. ISO (through working group TC159/SC4/WG9) is working toward international standards, which are being dual-tracked as both ISO and CEN standards. This paper gives an update on the status of the work in progress and the recently published International Standard on tactile/haptic interactions. Active involvement of experts is sought for work on terms and definitions and measures to characterize devices and operator capabilities.

Keywords: guidelines, haptics, human computer interaction, standards, tactile.

1 Introduction

Ergonomic standards go beyond providing consistency and interoperability. They help enhance usability in a number of ways including: improving effectiveness and avoiding errors, improving performance, and enhancing the comfort and well-being of users. Ergonomic standards provide a basis for analysis, design, evaluation, procurement, and even for arbitrating issues of international trade. Material providing guidance on the design and use of tactile and haptic interactions is sparse [1, 2]. Therefore, an ISO expert group has been working on standards documents for haptic interaction since 2005. ISO TC159/SC4/WG9 reported on its progress at several conferences
