Instrumentation Between Science, State and Industry B. Joerges,T. Shinn,2012-12-06 these In this book we appropriate their conception of research technology and extend it to many other phenomena which are less stable and less localized in time and space than the Zeeman Cotton situation In the following pages we use the concept for instances where research activities are orientated primarily toward technologies which facilitate both the production of scientific knowledge and the production of other goods In particular we use the term for instances where instruments and methods traverse numerous geographic and institutional boundaries that is fields distinctly different and distant from the instruments and methods initial focus We suggest that instruments such as the ultra centrifuge and the trajectories of the men who devise such artefacts diverge in an interesting way from other forms of artefacts and careers in science metrology and engineering with which students of science and technology are more familiar The instrument systems developed by research technologists strike us as especially general open ended and flexible When tailored effectively research technology instruments potentially fit into many niches and serve a host of unrelated applications Their multi functional character distinguishes them from many other devices which are designed to address specific narrowly defined problems in a circumscribed arena in and outside of science Research technology activities link universities industry public and private research or metrology establishments instrument making firms consulting companies the military and metrological agencies Research technology practitioners do not follow the career path of the traditional academic or engineering professional
