Grote Winkler Prins J. F. Staal, 1966 "A" List of Geographical Atlases in the Library of Congress, 1958 Atlas of the Netherlands Flora J. Mennema, A.J. Quene-Boterendrood, C.L. Plate, 2013-12-11 There is an element of fascination which many people feel about geographical maps because these maps allow fantasies about strange landscapes other peoples travels even adventures Distribution maps depicting the area which a plant or animal species occupies would appear to be less romantic but they are equally able to exercise our imagination or rather to stimulate our scientific curiosity Some distribution patterns are repeated time and time again although rarely fully identical and with their study comes the inescapable question what is it that determines a plant's area of distribution Almost immediately we find ourselves in the area of ecology for it is the plant's demands of its environment climate soil which determines where it will be able to grow and where not However that is not all there is to it for species as well as landscapes have their history and one needs to be informed about the climate and about the distribution of land and sea in the past for instance before one can understand present distributions This aspect of change in space and time historical plant geography is possibly the most fascinating part of plant geography However this atlas covering a minuscule part of the world is not meant to be primarily a book of historical plant geography It is true that a dynamic aspect is very prominent but this is on the smaller time scale of man made changes which mostly led to impoverishments Winkler Prins' Geïllustreerde encyclopaedie Antony Winkler Prins, 1905

Baud, J. Post, 2018-02-06 This title was first published in 2003 In the 1980s discussions on urban regional and international development were dominated by those advocating liberalism and free markets In the 1990s the experiences of many countries from the previous Soviet Union and those following socialist development models in the South have led to a renewed interest in the democratic institutions that underpin economic development processes Thus the state has come back into focus as an enabler a co ordinating agency working with a variety of other organizations in different forms of partnership aimed at urban and regional development At the same time increasing disparities between rich and poor have led poor urban households to organize collectively against poverty and to promote community and neighbourhood development This title examines how both these processes take place looking at patterns of fundamental re aligning between state civil society and the market in an integrated manner It focuses on urban and regional development because at the local and regional levels the direct interface between local government the local and global market and civil society organizations occurs The question of re alignment is considered from three main perspectives governance and community organization issues at local level urban areas as motors of economic development and their interface with globalization processes and urban areas as the nodes of regional development In each part of the book one of these perspectives is taken The contributions of the different authors are grouped around these complementary perspectives Changing alignment patterns also have far reaching implications In the last section the relation between research and policy around these issues is considered based on reflections by policy makers and academics who have been influential both nationally and internationally
