Gloyna,TEXAS UNIV AUSTIN.,1972 The report describes the work undertaken to represent and identify mathematical models of biological waste treatment as applied to laboratory sized aeration basins Both the mixing and the kinetics of laboratory aeration basins were examined Reproducible experimental data were easy to obtain The basin parameters for mixing and kinetics computed from the data enabled the models to be fit reasonably well if care is taken to use experimental data in the steady state Author Mathematical Models in Biological Waste Water Treatment Sven Erik Jørgensen,1985 The use of models in design control and optimization of biological wastewater treatment is steadily increasing and this book is unique in giving a comprehensive treatment of this rapidly growing field Written by an international group of experts the book deals with not only models of different processes activated sludge trickling filter rotating biological contactor waste stabilization pond nitrification denitrification anaerobic digestion etc but also shows different approaches used to find solutions used in different types of wastewater Theoretical approaches as well as practical applications from a number of countries are included and these are presented in a way which can be clearly comprehended by all engineers In an easy to understand style the book gives a comprehensive treatment of the state of the art which can be understood by all engineers who are interested in wastewater treatment and or modelling
