Abstract This research focuses on the role of a customer's perceived value in the purchase decision process. The study examines the relationship between perceived value and purchase intention, and the moderating effect of customer loyalty. The results show that perceived value has a positive impact on purchase intention, and this relationship is stronger for loyal customers. The study also finds that customer loyalty has a positive impact on purchase intention, and this relationship is stronger for customers with high perceived value. The study contributes to the understanding of the purchase decision process and provides practical implications for marketers.
