Vincent, 2024-12-10 What are joint ventures Historically JVs or Joint Enterprise Partners refers to individuals who joined forces to collaborate and partake in a business venture Today particularly in the field of Internet Marketing IM it has a slightly different connotation JV has become abbreviation for affiliate or someone who refers traffic to your offer in exchange for a commission on each sale To be honest this has created some confusion because even with IM a JV partnership in the conventional sense is still possible For instance if you ve created a video course and an ebook but lack the expertise or resources to get it online you may partner with someone who can handle web design and development and split profits 50 50 The fact that those two JV partners typically begin recruiting affiliates to drive traffic to their product while referring to those affiliates as JVs further complicates matters especially when those two JV partners divide earnings AFTER initial distributions to their JVs affiliates This occurs frequently in instant messaging and it s tough to decipher what someone means when they say would you like to be my JV However for whatever reason the majority of the time a person just means affiliate To be honest the IM community made a terrible error by confusing the concepts Real Estate Joint Ventures Don R.
