- Other private sector stakeholders believe that the proposed outcome process:
 - Encourages the state, government, and private sectors,

II. Indiana Cities

- Current Performance measures need to be changed to more closely measure and promote accountability. Institutions have a responsibility to their communities.
- Incorporating more relevant measures: It is important to measure performance in programs that are more relevant and realistic.
- Programs of Instruction: "What does each college measure in each program? Who funds personnel recruitment, including faculty and library."
- Programmatic operational efficiency. Programs often have different operational goals or responsibilities and their perceived efficiencies."

Comments from Indiana

- I. Instead of applying strict outcomes process and disciplines within the institution, the outcomes framework should encourage universities and higher education not necessarily discipline specific outcomes.
- Private Sector, business, engineering process: Not specifying things at the system level.
 - Indiana University would like a common core outcomes and outcomes specific to Indiana University.
- Programmatic: Programs must focus on the outcomes associated with the individual program and its outcomes.
- Measurement and assessment must be clearly defined.
 - Programs of instruction must align throughout the entire educational process.
- II. Programmatic outcomes must focus the individual areas in which they happen from a community context.

Comments from Indiana State

- The faculty and students in the public universities in Indiana have many concerns:
