Mycoagroecology Elizabeth Gall,Nouredine Benkeblia,2022-11-17 During the 20th century agriculture underwent many unsustainable changes for the sake of greater food production Today the effects of climate change are becoming ever more apparent and the global population continues to grow placing additional pressures on agricultural systems For this reason it is vital to turn international agriculture towards a sustainable future capable of providing healthy bountiful foods by using methods that preserve and reconstruct the balance of natural ecosystems Fungi are an underappreciated underutilized group of organisms with massive potential to aid in the production of healthy food and other products while also increasing the sustainability of agricultural systems

Mycoagroecology Integrating Fungi into Agroecosystems lays the foundations for integrated fungal agricultural understanding and management the proposed practice of mycoagroecology Suitable for students and professionals of multiple disciplines this text includes nine introductory chapters that create a firm foundation in ecosystem functioning evolution and population dynamics fungal biology principles of crop breeding and pest management basic economics of agriculture and the history of agricultural development during the 20th century The latter half of the text is application oriented integrating the knowledge from the introductory chapters to help readers understand more deeply the various roles of fungi in natural and agricultural systems

PARTNERS This text explores known benefits of wild plant fungal mutualisms and how to foster and maintain these relationships in a productive agricultural setting

PESTS AND PEST CONTROL AGENTS This text acknowledges the historical and continuing role of agriculturally significant fungal pathogens surveying modern chemical biotechnological and cultural methods of controlling them and other pests However this book also emphasizes the strong potential of beneficial fungi to biologically control fungal insect and other pests

PRODUCTS This text covers not just isolated production of mushrooms on specialized farms but also the potential for co cropping mushrooms in existing plant based farms making farm systems more self sustaining while adding valuable and nutritious new products An extensive chapter is also devoted to the many historical and forward facing uses of fungi in food preservation and processing

Technical guidance on fall armyworm Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2022-05-27

Worldwide maize is the third most important cereal after rice and wheat It occupies 197 million hectares of planted area Asia contributes to nearly 30 percent of global maize supplies and area and production of the crop is rapidly increasing in the continent Minimum support prices swelling market demand from the animal feed and processing industries as well as human consumption have all led to increased maize production in zones where precipitation limits rice cultivation However maize production is currently threatened by the arrival in Asia in 2018 of the fall armyworm FAW Spodoptera frugiperda J E Smith a native to North America It invaded India in 2018 and since then it has marched to most of the Asian countries In 2019 its presence was confirmed in 13 Asian countries including Cambodia China India Indonesia Japan the Lao People s Democratic Republic Malaysia Myanmar Nepal the Philippines the Republic of Korea Sri Lanka and Viet Nam In 2020 it was confirmed in Australia Timor Leste and Papua New Guinea In August 2021 it reached the Solomon Islands posing a serious threat to other Pacific islands FAW is a fast dispersing migratory transboundary insect pest While high FAW incidences have been reported on several crops in Asia the most important economic damage caused is to maize followed by sorghum The FAW invasion threatens the food security of millions of family farms in Asia with smallholder farmers being especially vulnerable The negative economic impact of FAW is not only evident in yield loss the pest also leads to a significant increase in insecticide applications with associated health environmental and cost issues At the same time resilience to FAW on the continent is currently weakened by the limited access to necessary tools technologies and sustainable integrated pest management IPM practices for FAW Thus there is an urgent need to implement an effective approach to FAW management in Asia Grants Administration United States.
