The Final Exam covers material from the entire quarter, but will be more heavily focused (~70%) on topics covered after Midterm 2. Use the review sheets from Midterms 1 & 2 to study the earlier material. The exam is 90 multiple-choice questions, worth 180 points total. Make sure to review the Hardy-Weinberg equations, phylogenetic trees, and watch any videos that I posted on CCLE.

Animal Diversity - Chapter 44 & Sections 35.1, 37.3, 40.3, 42.1, 42.2

- When did the Cambrian explosion occur? How did this affect the diversity of animals on earth?
545 million years ago. Allowed occupation of new niches
- What are the key traits in animals? Are animals a monophyletic group?
eukaryotes, heterotrophs, mobile at one point in life
- How is cephalization related to nervous system development? (Figures 35.2 and 35.3 shown in lecture) How is symmetry related to cephalization? What are the adaptive advantages of cephalization?
brainssssssssssssss
- What are the sensory receptors we discussed and how are each beneficial? (Figures 36.6, 36.11, 36.12, 36.13) What is the role of pheromones in animal communication? (Figs 38.14, 38.15, 38.16)
sensory stuff and smell and recognizing other animals and communication, etc.
- What are the different ways that animals feed?
filter feeding, carnivore, grass
- What are the characteristics of Porifera? How are porifera similar to/different from the choanoflagellates?
porifera - sponge, body full of pores . choanoflagellates aren't related to porifera
- Where on the phylogenetic tree did tissues evolve? Which animals are diploblastic and triploblastic? What is the fate of the different developmental tissue layers in animals?
tissues evolved right after sponges. All animals triploblastic except cnidarians (ctenophores and acoels), which are diploblastic. Each layer develops into endoderm, ectoderm, mesoderm, allows complex muscle tissue used for movement
- What are the characteristics of Cnidarians? How do they move and reproduce? What is the role of the cnidocytes? In what ways are cnidarians colonial? What symbiotic interactions do cnidarians have with other organisms?
radial symmetry, diploblastic, asexual reproduction, move by hydrostatic pressure, form colonies like coral reefs, symbiosis with photoautotrophs
- How are Ctenophores similar and different to cnidarians? What role did Mnemiopsis, a ctenophore introduced to the Black Sea, have on the ecology of that region?
mostly similar, except ctenophores have 8 rows of cilia to help them move. Mnemiopsis destroyed lots of native organisms there and dominated.
- Why is the hydrostatic skeleton important for movement in some groups of animals? (Figure 37.15 a & b)
the soft skeleton can contract and expand to help movement.

Science Curriculum Topic Study Page Keeley, Joyce Tugel, 2019-09-11 Today's science standards reflect a new vision of teaching and learning. How to make this vision happen. Scientific literacy for all students requires a deep understanding of the three dimensions of science education: disciplinary content, scientific and engineering practices, and crosscutting concepts. If you actively engage students in using and applying these three dimensions within curricular topics, they will develop a scientifically based and coherent view of the natural and designed world. The latest edition of this best seller, newly mapped to the Framework for K-12 Science Education and the Next Generation Science Standards (NGSS) and updated with new standards and research-based resources, will help science educators make the shifts needed to reflect current practices in curriculum, instruction, and assessment. The methodical study process described in this book will help readers intertwine content practices and crosscutting concepts. The book includes an increased emphasis on STEM, including topics in science, technology, and engineering. 103 separate curriculum topic study guides arranged in six categories: Connections to content knowledge, curricular and instructional implications, concepts and specific ideas, research on student learning, K-12 articulation, and assessment. Teachers and those who support teachers will appreciate how Curriculum Topic Study helps them reliably analyze and interpret their standards and translate them into classroom practice, thus ensuring that students achieve a deeper understanding of the natural and designed world. Singh, M.I. Hassan, 2014-05-22 The over-exploitation of important earth resources such as land and water has led to a number of environment-related problems the world over. At the same time, land use change caused by various human activities has led to extinction of many plant and animal habitats and species. In this context, the relevance of biodiversity for human survival is becoming a major international political issue as scientific evidence builds on the global health implications of biodiversity loss. These issues are closely linked with the issue of climate change as many of the health risks due to climate change are associated with rapid degradation of biodiversity. This present work focuses on holistic natural resource-based spatio-temporal planning, development, and management and considers them as essential to save the degraded ecosystem for sustainable resource management. Contributions are compiled in two volumes: 1. Climate Change and Biodiversity and 2. Landscape Ecology and Water Management. Geoinformatics along with its tools such as remote sensing and Geographical Information Systems (GIS)

have been used in assessing the results of various environmental problems both physical and social These volumes will be useful for geographers geoscientists hydrologists landscape ecologists environmentalists engineers planners and policy makers
