Sutcliffe,2023-11-27 The task of language engineering is to develop the technology for building computer systems which can perform useful linguistic tasks such as machine assisted translation text retrieval message classification and document summarisation Such systems often require the use of a parser which can extract specific types of grammatical data from pre defined classes of input text There are many parsers already available for use in language engineering systems However many different linguistic formalisms and parsing algorithms are employed

Grammatical coverage varies as does the nature of the syntactic information extracted. Direct comparison between systems is difficult because each is likely to have been evaluated using different test criteria. In this volume eight different parsers are applied to the same task that of analysing a set of sentences derived from software instruction manuals. Each parser is presented in a separate chapter. Evaluation of performance is carried out using a standard set of criteria with the results being presented in a set of tables which have the same format for each system. Three additional chapters provide further analysis of the results as well as discussing possible approaches to the standardisation of parse tree data. Five parse trees are provided for each system in an appendix allowing further direct comparison between systems by the reader. The book will be of interest to students, researchers and practitioners in the areas of computational linguistics, computer science, information retrieval, language engineering, linguistics and machine assisted translation.

The Software Factory Challenge social, organisational and technical aspects. The project was set up under the pan European Eureka programme and it was funded by the partners together with their national governments This book is not a history of the ESF project but rather a presentation of its main ideas and achievements and an account of how the concepts pioneered by the project have become part of a general movement in both the industrial and academic domains In this movement the facility for the production use and maintenance of large scale computer artefacts the Software Factory is treated in a wide and organic way so as to include concepts such as business value and process improvement with the development of new technologies being driven by these new wide requirements This new approach is in contrast with a narrowly technological one in which individual tasks like programming are aided by machines but in which the production process as a whole is not supported The main body of the book is divided into four Parts Part I gives a short overview of the ESF project and its ideas and goes on to attempt to place the ESF work in the context of industry as a whole with reference to both producers and users of Information Technology systems Part II sets out to explain the technological basis of the Software Factory as seen by ESF and goes on to describe some experimental and pioneering implementations of Factory Support Environments and their constituents Part III is devoted to the most complete implementation of an ESF Factory Support Environment to date Kernel 2r This Section provides a highly detailed discussion of both design and implementation issues In Part IV addresses what deployment strategies are now available to continue the spread of these ideas in order to meet the goal of better software based systems i e systems which are safer more economical to build more easily changed and more useful than those that have been built up to now Finally a Glossary of Terms and a list of References is given Readers those who have a professional interest in Information Technology
