

Het Grote Bloemschilderboek

Berwitz Waterschoot
Boskamp Westzaan

Elizabethan scholars like us are bound up with certain more or less definite values and legends of their past life, interwoven with personal memory likewise, making up a composite picture. These older elements, although not always conscious, are nevertheless dominant. The older elements often lead us astray, for they do not always point us towards the true and the most responsible interpretation. The famous French成语 l'ancien est malade de l'ancien is a warning to us. We must never let old legends, ancient associations, and generalities蒙蔽 our eyes; else much more even than the one-fifth of Elizabethan plays may prove stage misinterpretations.
