Formational Children's Ministry (ēmerision: Emergent Village resources for communities of faith) Ivy Beckwith,2010-01-01 Much ministry to children looks more like mere entertainment than authentic spiritual formation But what if children s ministries were rooted in a mind set whereby we taught children with our words and actions how the story of God the story of church history the story of the local community and the story of the child intersect and speak to one another What if children s ministry was less about downloading information into kids heads and more about leading them into these powerful compelling stories Beckwith aims to help ministers and parents create a ministry that captures children s imaginations not just to keep them occupied but to live as citizens of the kingdom of God In addition to providing theological reasons for formational children s ministry the book offers examples of how Ivy and other practitioners are implementing a formational model together and interprets for the church and especially for preachers the biblical materials on the relationship between God and his creation. The book is particularly timely because as Elizabeth Achtemeier points out few subjects have been more neglected and less explicated by this country's pulpits than the relation between nature and God. Clearly articulating what the Bible says about the material world and God's relation to it, this book is all of the following: A thoughtful biblical response to recent discussions of ecology; A discerning corrective to many current theologies and ideologies; An appreciative summary of the findings and notions of modern science; A mother lode of materials and sample sermons on the relation of God to his creation; A passionate call for preachers to more thoroughly examine and articulate scriptural content; An eloquent and inspiring celebration of God in relation to his world. While written primarily for preachers, Nature, God, and Pulpit will provide provocative reading for many others as well: seminarians, homiletics students, teachers, and anybody who wishes to better understand the Christian view of the bond between Creator and creation.
