Hintikkas Take Realism Constructivist Challenge:

Hintikka's Take on Realism and the Constructivist Challenge Radmila Jovanovic, 2015-11-30 The subject of this book are game theoretically oriented semantics which provide an alternative to traditional Tarski style semantics implementing Wittgenstein's idea of the meaning as use. The basic idea is that the meaning is obtained in a game between two players one trying to defend and the other trying to falsify the expression at stake. The notion of truth or that of validity is based on the existence of a winning strategy of the initial verifier in a game. The direction is the opposite of that in Tarski style semantics the game starts with the entire expression and runs until its component parts are reached. In this book I will be interested in two different game theoretical traditions: Game Theoretical Semantics developed by Jaako Hintikka and Gabriel Sandu and Dialogical logic first introduced by Paul Lorenzen and Kuno Lorenz and further developed by Shahid Rahman and his associates.

Hintikka's Defence of Realism and the Constructivist Challenge Radmila Jovanovic, 2015 This thesis studies game theoretically oriented semantics which provide an alternative to traditional Tarski style semantics implementing Wittgenstein's idea of the meaning as use. Two different game theoretical traditions are presented: Game Theoretical Semantics (GTS) developed by Jaako Hintikka and Gabriel Sandu and Dialogical logic first introduced by Paul Lorenzen and Kuno Lorenz and further developed by Shahid Rahman and his associates. In 1989 Hintikka and Sandu came up with games with imperfect information. Those games yielded Independence friendly first order logic (IF logic) exceeding the expressive power of classical first order logic. It is expressive enough to enable formulating linearly and at the first order level sentences containing branching quantification. Because of this characteristic Hintikka claims that IF logic is most suitable for at least two main purposes: to be the logic of the first order fragment of natural language and to be the medium for the foundation of mathematics. This thesis aims to explore the above uses of IF logic. The properties of IF logic are discussed as well as the advantages of this approach such as the possibility of taking account of dependency relations among variables. GTS account of two different notions of scope of quantifiers the outside in direction in approaching the meaning which turns out to be advantageous over the traditional inside out approach the usefulness of game theoretic reasoning in mathematics the expressiveness of IF language which allows formulating branching quantifiers on the first order level as well as defining the truth predicate in the language itself. We defend Hintikka's stance on the first order character of IF logic against some criticisms of this point. The weak points are also discussed first and foremost the lack of a full axiomatization for IF logic and second the problem of signalling a problematic phenomenon related to the possibility of imperfect information in a game. We turn to another game theoretically oriented semantics that of Dialogical Logic linked with Constructive Type Theory in which dependency relations can be accounted for but without using more means than constructive logic and the dialogical approach to meaning have to offer. This framework is used first to analyse and confront Hintikka's take on the axiom of choice and second to analyse the GTS account of anaphora.

An Internalist Theory of Meaning* Gabriele Usberti, 2023-07-28 This volume develops a theory of meaning and a semantics for both mathematical and empirical sentences inspired to Chomsky's internalism namely to a view of semantics as the study of the relations of language not with external reality but with internal or mental reality In the first part a theoretical notion of justification for a sentence A is defined by induction on the complexity of A intuitively justifications are conceived as cognitive states of a particular kind The main source of inspiration for this part is Heyting's explanation of the intuitionistic meaning of logical constants In the second part the theory is applied to the solution of several foundational problems in the theory of meaning and epistemology such as Frege's puzzle Mates puzzle about synonymy the paradox of analysis Kripke's puzzle about belief the de re de dicto distinction the specific non specific distinction Gettier s problems the paradox of knowability and the characterization of truth On a more general philosophical level throughout the book the author develops a tight critique of the neo verificationism of Dummett Prawitz and Martin L f and defends a mentalist interpretation of intuitionism

Constructivism J. Samuel Barkin,2010 Realism and constructivism two key contemporary theoretical approaches to the study of international relations are commonly taught as mutually exclusive ways of understanding the subject Realist Constructivism explores the common ground between the two and demonstrates that rather than being in simple opposition they have areas of both tension and overlap There is indeed space to engage in a realist constructivism But at the same time there are important distinctions between them and there remains a need for a constructivism that is not realist and a realism that is not constructivist Samuel Barkin argues more broadly for a different way of thinking about theories of international relations that focuses on the corresponding elements within various approaches rather than on a small set of mutually exclusive paradigms Realist Constructivism provides an interesting new way for scholars and students to think about international relations theory Provided by publisher      Constructivism in Practical Philosophy James Lenman,Yonatan Shemmer,2012-08-02 This volume presents twelve original papers on constructivism some sympathetic others critical by a distinguished group of moral philosophers Kantian constructivism holds that moral objectivity is to be understood in terms of a suitably constructed social point of view that all can accept Apart from the procedure of constructing the principles of justice there are no moral facts So wrote John Rawls in his highly influential 1980 Dewey lectures Kantian Constructivism in Moral Theory Since then there has been much discussion of constructivist understandings Kantian or otherwise both of morality and of reason more generally Such understandings typically seek to characterize the truth conditions of propositions in their target domain in maximally metaphysically unassuming ways frequently in terms of the outcome of certain procedures or the passing of certain tests procedures or tests that speak to the distinctively practical concerns of deliberating human agents living together in societies But controversy abounds over the interpretation and the scope as well as the credibility of such constructivist ideas The essays collected here reach to the heart of this contemporary philosophical debate and offer a range of new approaches and perspectives      Realist Constructivism ,2010      What Is Constructivist about Realism? Ahmed Ali Salem,2012-08 This book is an in depth analysis of the classic works of leading theorists in the realist school of international relations It criticizes the works of Carr Morgenthau and Waltz and their contributions to the continuous building and rebuilding of realism It highlights their problematic assumptions internal inconsistencies and failures to address important aspects of international relations It also criticizes later realist attempts to fix serious problems of Waltz's theory in order to save the realist paradigm in international relations. Criticisms are based on a constructivist point of view. The first argument is that at least some constructivist theories are compatible with realism in spite of a general lack of recognition of this compatibility in the international relations literature. The second argument is that constructivism is embedded in realism. The realist paradigm was founded and developed in part on ideational concepts later claimed by social constructivists. The third argument is that realism also has something to offer constructivism, especially the potential of solving serious constructivist puzzles, notably the insufficiency of the logic of appropriateness.

Social Constructivism and the Philosophy of Science André Kukla, 2013-01-11. Social constructionists maintain that we invent the properties of the world rather than discover them. Is reality constructed by our own activity? Do we collectively invent the world rather than discover it? André Kukla presents a comprehensive discussion of the philosophical issues that arise out of this debate, analysing the various strengths and weaknesses of a range of constructivist arguments and arguing that current philosophical objections to constructivism are inconclusive. However, Kukla offers and develops new objections to constructivism, distinguishing between the social causes of scientific beliefs and the view that all ascertainable facts are constructed.

Toward a Constructivist Theory of Realism James A. Stieglitz, 2004. The Social Construction of State Power J. Samuel Barkin, 2021. Realism and constructivism are often viewed as competing paradigms for understanding international relations, but this innovative volume provides an exposition of the realist constructivist approach and uses a series of international case studies to show what realist constructivist research can look like in practice.
