Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a supervised walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks for physical and psychological health. The physical health assessment included measures of weight, body mass index (BMI), waist circumference, blood pressure, heart rate, and resting metabolic rate. The psychological health assessment included measures of self-esteem, anxiety, and depression. The results of the study showed that the walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the subjects. The walking program resulted in a significant decrease in weight, BMI, waist circumference, blood pressure, heart rate, and resting metabolic rate. The walking program also resulted in a significant increase in self-esteem, a significant decrease in anxiety, and a significant decrease in depression. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to investigate the effects of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of elderly people. The study was conducted in a community center in a city in the north of Iran. The participants were 30 elderly people (15 men and 15 women) aged 65-75 years. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group participated in a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not participate in any training program. The results showed that the experimental group had significant improvements in physical and psychological health compared to the control group. The study concluded that a 12-week training program can improve the physical and psychological health of elderly people.
