Seeing with the Hands Mark Paterson, 2016-02-29 A literary historical and philosophical discussion of attitudes to blindness by the sighted and what the blind see Why has there been a persistent fascination by the sighted including philosophers poets and the public in what the blind see Is the experience of being blind as Descartes declared like seeing with the hands What happens on the rare occasions when surgery allows previously blind people to see for the very first time And how did evidence from early experimental surgery inform those philosophical debates about vision and touch These questions and others were prompted by a question that the Irish scientist Molyneux asked an English philosopher Locke in 1688 but which was to have implications for British empiricism French sensationism and the beginnings of psychology that outlasted the long tail of the Enlightenment Through an unfolding historical and philosophical narrative the book follows up responses to this question in Britain and France and considers it as an early articulation of sensory substitution the substitution of one sense touch for another vision This concept has influenced attitudes towards blindness and technologies for the blind and vision impaired to this day Key Features Unfolds the history of blindness from 17th century that shades into the beginnings of psychology Questions the assumed centrality of vision and the eye in Enlightenment philosophy and science Traces the core idea of sensory substitution from hypothetical speculations in the 17th century to present day technologies for the blind and vision impaired

The Hand on the Shakespearean Stage Farah Karim Cooper, 2016-04-21 This ground breaking new book uncovers the way Shakespeare draws upon the available literature and visual representations of the hand to inform his drama Providing an analysis of gesture touch skill and dismemberment in a range of Shakespeare's works it shows how the hand was perceived in Shakespeare's time as an indicator of human agency, emotion, social and personal identity. It demonstrates how the hand and its activities are described and embedded in Shakespeare's texts and about its role on the Shakespearean stage as part of the actor's body in the language as metaphor and as a morbid stage prop. Understanding the cultural signifiers that lie behind the early modern understanding of the hand and gesture opens up new and sometimes disturbing ways of reading and seeing Shakespeare's plays.

A Finger in Lincoln's Brain E. Lawrence Abel, 2015-01-16 This intriguing book examines Lincoln's assassination from a behavioral and medical sciences perspective, providing new insights into everything from ballistics and forensics to the medical intervention to save his life, the autopsy results, his compromised embalming and the final odyssey of his bodily remains. In this book E. Lawrence Abel sheds much needed light on the fascinating details surrounding the death of Abraham Lincoln, including John Wilkes Booth's illness that turned him into an assassin, the medical treatment the president is alleged to have received after he was shot, and the significance of his funeral for the American public. The author provides an in-depth analysis of the science behind the assassination, a discussion of the medical care Lincoln received at the time he was shot and the treatment he would have received if he were shot today, and the impact of his death on his contemporaries and the American public. The book examines Lincoln's fatalism and his unbridled ambition in terms of empirical psychological science rather than the fanciful psychoanalytical explanations that often characterize Lincoln psychohistories. The medical chapters challenge the long-standing description of Lincoln's last hours and examine the debate about whether Lincoln's doctors inadvertently doomed him.
