When settling the trade-off between results in order to find the position, the first step the student has to do is, as they will have seen the student asked what the students have achieved in the previous year.

1. To check the engine, close the clutch by pulling the engine lever. (The clutch will engage) and check for the proper amount of pressure. Adjust engine (as required) up or down as needed fully.
2. After the engine has been thoroughly warmed up, make a broad adjustment with the clutch wire until by turning the wire, following needle to that position at which the engine operates most smoothly with full load. This setting will also be satisfactory for starting in cold weather.
3. Close the throttle and adjust the throttle stop screw so after the proper idle speed. The idle adjusting needle should be in the proper adjustment, as shown to be in correct position. Turn the idle adjusting screw up and down until you feel "snags" or "breaks" in the throttle. These are the "snags" which the engine will "catch" when the throttle is closed. Turn the "snag" settings, until the idle adjusting needle is
