English Leadership Quarterly, 1995 Race Talk in the Age of the Trigger Warning Mara Lee Grayson, 2020-03-20 To generate opportunities for transformative learning educators must create learning environments that help students feel safe and encourage them to grapple with potentially difficult material The trigger warning a brief statement informing students of potential distressing or re-traumatizing content has been offered as a way to do just that but this practice is neither as effective nor as equitable as it may seem Intentionally or indirectly the trigger warning limits the extent to which students are encouraged to engage in transformative critical conversations and reinforces the culture of silence that prevails in many educational spaces Emerging as a response to trauma amid an educational environment that professes student responsiveness and celebrates diversity yet perpetuates the marginalization of many of the bodies in the classroom the trigger warning is not the problem but it is not the solution either What does this mean for the faculty members teaching this new generation of college students And the teachers who find this generation's younger siblings in their high school classrooms Drawing upon original research Mara Lee Grayson tracks the rise of the trigger warning within historical and contemporary educational contexts explores its potentialities limitations and abuses as praxis and offers curricular suggestions for high school and college instructors seeking to implement equitable antiracist pedagogies that simultaneously encourage students well-being provoke intellectual and emotional growth and challenge the cultures of silence that maintain inequity on school campuses
