International Relations offers the most authoritative and comprehensive overview to date of the field of international relations. The Handbook takes as its central themes the interaction between empirical and normative inquiry that permeates all theorizing in the field and the way in which contending approaches have shaped one another. In doing so, the Handbook provides an authoritative and critical introduction to the subject and establishes a sense of the field as a dynamic realm of argument and inquiry. The Oxford Handbook of International Relations will be essential reading for all of those interested in the advanced study of global politics and international affairs.

Visualising the Empire of Capital Martyn Hudson, 2019-08-21. Methods of visualising modernity and capitalism have been central to classical social science. Those methods of seeing specifically in the work of Marx were attempts to capture visually the fragmenting edifice of capital in its death throes and were part of a project to hasten its demise, yet capitalism persisted and perpetuated itself in new forms such that its demise now looks less likely than it did 150 years ago. This book argues for a new way of understanding Marx and a new way of approaching both capitalist modernity and Marx's Capital by rethinking the nature of vision. Through studies of visualisation in relation to machines and the monstrous memory mirrors and optics and the invisible, Visualising the Empire of Capital offers a new way of thinking about what capital is and its future. A new reading of and against Marx, this volume argues for new forms of sensual utopia while initiating antagonism to the empire of capital itself. As such, it will appeal to social theorists, social anthropologists, and sociologists with interests in critical theory, visual culture, and aesthetics.

This book shows the many facets of African engagements with the world. It starts from the premise that current global asymmetries ascribing Africa to a marginalized position are the effects of colonial and imperial pasts still lingering on. The decolonization process of the post-war structure which privileges the West in both political and economic terms. While new dependencies emerged, several old bonds were maintained and continue to influence African affairs quite strikingly. It is appropriate then to call these continued unequal relations between Africa and the West frankly neo-colonial. This designation applies all the more as the post-colonial states of Africa inherited a complex legacy of foreign rule, colonial frontiers, colonial languages, colonial infrastructure, and authoritarian institutions as well as the social intricacies and imbalances so characteristic of the colonial situation The contributions to this volume look at various aspects of these complex processes from intellectual history perspectives The topics dealt with are manifold Contributions deliberately attack key themes ideas and discourses of an intellectual history of Africa state modernity development dependency art etc and introduce important engaged public intellectuals from Africa and the African diaspora What is Africa and how is she related to the rest of the world How can she overcome her internal problems and her external dependencies These are perennial questions critically tackled by Africans throughout the 20th century Dealing with various cases looked at from a variety of perspectives the contributions to this book offer original insights into the intellectual history of Africa
