The Figure of the Detective Charles Brownson, 2014-01-23 This book begins with a history of the detective genre coextensive with the novel itself identifying the attitudes and institutions needed for the genre to emerge in its mature form around 1880 The theory of the genre is laid out along with its central theme of the getting and deployment of knowledge Sherlock Holmes the English Classic stories and their inheritors are examined in light of this theme and the balance of two forms of knowledge used in fictional detection cool or rational and warm or emotional The evolution of the genre formula is driven by changes in the social climate in which it is embedded These changes explain the decay of the English Classic and its replacement by noir hardboiled and spy stories to end in the cul de sac of the thriller and the nostalgic Neo Classic Possible new forms of the detective story are suggested Teaching History for the Common Good Keith C. Barton, Linda S. Levstik, 2004-07-13 In Teaching History for the Common Good Barton and Levstik present a clear overview of competing ideas among educators historians politicians and the public about the nature and purpose of teaching history and they evaluate these debates in light of current research on students historical thinking In many cases disagreements about what should be taught to the nation s children and how it should be presented reflect fundamental differences that will not easily be resolved A central premise of this book though is that systematic theory and research can play an important role in such debates by providing evidence of how students think how their ideas interact with the information they encounter both in school and out and how these ideas differ across contexts Such evidence is needed as an alternative to the untested assumptions that plague so many discussions of history education The authors review research on students historical thinking and set it in the theoretical context of mediated action an approach that calls attention to the concrete actions that people undertake the human agents responsible for such actions the cultural tools that aid and constrain them their purposes and their social contexts They explain how this theory allows educators to address the breadth of practices settings purposes and tools that influence students developing understanding of the past as well as how it provides an alternative to the academic discipline of history as a way of making decisions about teaching and learning the subject in schools Beyond simply describing the factors that influence students thinking Barton and Levstik evaluate their implications for historical understanding and civic engagement They base these evaluations not on the disciplinary study of history but on the purpose of social education preparing students for participation in a pluralist democracy Their ultimate concern is how history can help citizens engage in collaboration toward the common good In Teaching History for the Common Good Barton and Levstik discuss the contribution of theory and research explain the theory of mediated action and how it guides their analysis and describe research on children s and adults knowledge of and interest in history lay out a vision of pluralist participatory democracy and its relationship to the humanistic study of history as a basis for evaluating the perspectives on the past that influence students learning explore four principal stances toward history identification analysis moral response and exhibition review research on the extent to which children and adolescents understand and accept each of these and examine how the stances might contribute to or detract from participation in a pluralist democracy address six of the principal tools of history narrative structure stories of individual achievement and motivation national narratives inquiry empathy as perspective taking and empathy as caring and review research and conventional wisdom on teachers knowledge and practice and argue that for teachers to embrace investigative multi perspectival approaches to history they need more than knowledge of content and pedagogy they need a guiding purpose that can be fulfilled only by these approaches and preparation for participatory democracy provides such purpose Teaching History for the Common Good is essential reading for history and social studies professionals researchers teacher educators and students as well as for policymakers parents and members of the general public who are interested in history education or in students thinking and learning about the subject understanding of history is enhanced by encasing it in art and interest Crime fiction is one of the widest and most rapidly growing forms of literature Historical crime fiction serves effectively the double purpose of entertaining while it teaches The truth of the narrative account the editors of this volume believe is dependent on the understanding of human nature reflected in the author who writes the narrative Historical crime fiction the editors of this volume write has an obligation and a golden opportunity It must bring the past up to the present through the device of timeless crime and it must take the reader into the world about which is being written so that the characters are alive and the events interesting and challenging Professional writers of fiction need to be more effective than mere authors of dates and assumed motivations Therefore they can fill in human motivations and drives where no records exist and can aid the professional historians in what historian David Thelen calls the challenge of history which is to recover the past and interpret it for the present The essays in this volume accept the challenge and make major accomplishments for meeting it

Thinking Like a Historian Nikki Mandell, Bobbie Malone, 2013-06-19

Thinking Like a Historian will help you bring history to your classroom and reenergize your teaching of this crucial discipline in new ways. A group of experienced Wisconsin historians and educators representing elementary through university levels developed and piloted this framework. The Thinking Like a Historian charts, which are the centerpiece of Thinking Like a Historian, were created by condensing into simplified and easily remembered language the combined expertise of the historical profession as expressed in the published standards of the American Historical Association, the Organization of American Historians, the National Council for History Education, the National History Standards, and state standards for Wisconsin and California. Thinking Like a Historian is the fruit of our thinking and practice grounded in the highest standards of the discipline, designed to stimulate your own thinking, planning, and teaching. Adapt or draw inspiration from the examples for engaging and effective lessons and classroom activities. Return again and again to the common language of Thinking Like a Historian as a foundation that can connect and develop students' curiosity about and understanding of history throughout their school years. As history educators, we wholeheartedly embrace the responsibility and opportunity to guide the next generation to think more deeply about the past, to think like historians.
